RENEE RETURNS TO GHANA!

In this issue:

- Renee returns
- Why our students value education
- Student birthdays
- Student spotlights
- Teacher on maternity leave

Renee Farwell, co-director of Mawuvio's Outreach Programme, returned to Ghana at the end of this month. She is stoked to be back with her kids, catching up with members of the community, and getting back into the swing of teaching as the third term really gets moving. She has also been looking forward to being there in person to assist co-director Kwame Agoe in administrative doings and decisions on the ground!

Keeping Perspective...

This month, we will also include some short excerpts of a couple of our students' writing. Because of the nature of pre-college education here in the U.S., it's sometimes easy to forget that not every child has the same opportunities elsewhere in the world. M.O.P. provides education for children who would not otherwise be able to attend school. And, as you can see, our students understand just how valuable that is.

"Some of our parents work a lot before they will get money to cook for the family and even some of our mothers must wash people's clothes before getting money. Our school fees, our light bill fees and also some small things, it is hard for them to pay it. And even some of us students because our parents don't have money we come and sit in the house for a while instead of going to school. By the grace, we have gotten a free school."
—Alex Boateng

"Schooling will help us to educate ourselves to create a better future."

—Benjamin Gborwosu
